Quigley Museum

One of Amherst's early inhabitants, Joseph Quigley, built this house himself in the 1820's using sandstone that was quarried from land he owned in Amherst. Many Amherst residents lived inside this charming house until it became the Amherst Historical Society's main museum in 1989. This museum houses several exhibits that celebrate the life and accomplishments of Amherstonians since the founding of our city. Displays remind visitors of the early history of Amherst including the history of the sandstone quarries.

Amherst Sandstone Village

Harris/Dute House

A two-story 1840's house is a beautiful example of Greek revival architecture, and bears the surnames of the two families who inhabited it for the greatest amount of time. Volunteers and hired contractors completed reconstruction and restoration of the house in 2001. Because of their efforts, visitors can now enjoy lovely rooms representing the style of the 1840's to the 1880's.

One-Room Schoolhouse

Constructed in 1879, the building was originally a one-room schoolhouse before becoming a Grange. Since 1988, it has been maintained and preserved through a collaborative effort between the Nord Family Foundation and the Hickory Tree Grange. The Amherst Historical Society's award-winning "One Room Schoolhouse" program takes place here. In addition, people from all over Amherst and beyond can rent the Grange for special events while enjoying the historic feel of the building!

St. George Chapel

This 1882 chapel has been a schoolhouse, church, and apartment, is now remembered and restored for the Episcopalian church that gave its name in 1913. It contains artifacts and information donated by numerous Amherst churches. Today, people also have the option of hosting weddings at this beautifully restored vintage setting.

Blacksmith Shop

A replica of a Vermont blacksmith shop was constructed almost entirely of pre-Civil War maple wood and Amherst sandstone. Visitors can also see this piece of history in use while our talented blacksmiths perform an ancient trade!

Octagonal Barn & Carriage House

An early 20th century 8-sided barn represents a rare sight in America today. Built to withstand high winds and to conserve lumber, this geometric barn now houses vintage farm tools and farm equipment.

Ferrier Shop and Machine Shop

The machine shop is currently being restored, and will be operated by a steam belt. The Ferrier shop was important because this was where one's horse received new horseshoes.

Art Gallery

The Jenne Building is a replica of an early 1900 storefront that houses an art gallery. The gallery contains the watercolor work of Janine Jacob-Beleski.

Amherst Auto Garage

On display in the Auto Garage are two vintage autos – 1920 Model T Ford and 1920's Model Chevy Stake Truck donated by Evan Nord. The 1900's Auto Garage is in a building that is original to the property and contains many interesting items you would have found in a repair garage of that time period.

Pig Barn

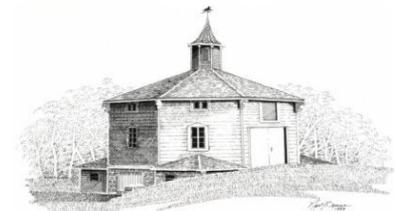

This charming stone building is made entirely of cut sandstone quarried around 1890-1900 from the Amherst Quarries and was used as a pigsty.

Live Oak Engine Co.

Funds from the Ohio Cultural Facilities Commission, Community Foundation of Lorain County and Nordson Corporation with labor from volunteers help to build this museum. The building houses artifacts and the history of the Amherst Fire Department.

1925 B&O I-5 #C2282 Caboose

In 2004 the caboose was moved to the Village from Oberlin – a donation from Evan Nord. The interior contains a pictorial history of the 1916 Amherst Train Wreck and its impact on the Village of Amherst.
